Dear hiring manager,

I am writing to express my interest for the engineering opportunity that is now open within your company.

I posses many years of professional and personal experience building full stack platforms and applications, including database structures and architecture, native-mobile and mobile friendly UI, cross-browser optimized platforms, and beyond these I have spent 3+ years assisting cutting edge AI project and development within the most important university in Europe, whilst working in Intel.

By nature I am an attentive person which likes to communicate and share my ideas and perspective. Technically I like to test every possible scenario before I can be happy with anything I build and over the time I spent working on various projects and companies, I learnt the most important concepts and programming patterns, clean code, software architecture and team structure and management.

My technological stack include the most popular Javascript libraries and frameworks, mostly React, Typescript, MongoDB, GraphQL, Express, Node, Nest and JEST. I also have some experience in Python and Flask, which I would be really happy to be able to deepen.
I will be really happy to discuss them all in details in the near future with you.

I look forward and hope to hear back from you soon, and thank you in advance for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Jacopo Rodighiero.